City Refuses to Rezone HUD Land

By PAM TROBOY

The question of whether an east Plano tract could be rezoned was really answered before the public hearing began Thursday night.

Almost 2,000 residents had petitioned the City Council to consider rezoning 27.8 acres on the northwest and southwest corners of the Park Boulevard-Avenue N intersection.

But the law firm of Boyd, Viegel & Gay Inc., retained by the city for advice on dealing with the Department of Housing and Urban Development, told the council and Planning and Zoning Commission that the city "has no option but to deny."

Stressing that it was question of law, Bill Boyd said the council had no discretion in the matter at all.

Since the action to rezone the property from apartments to retail was only initiated after plans for a HUD approved housing project were announced, all legal precedents are against the city, the attorney explained.

"Cases involving rezoning immediately upon learning of plans to erect lower income housing have consistently been determined in favor of the property owner and the future users of the assisted housing system," he said.

Federal courts have viewed the actions of city councils and planning and zoning commissions in reaction to petitions as a "direct result of the bias and prejudice on the part of owners of property, which feeling carried over to the members of the two governing bodies."

The courts have found the true motivation to be an attempt "to keep a large concentration of negroes and other minority groups from living in the area and possibly bringing about a depreciation in property values in the immediate vicinity."

"Arguments that neighborhoods would become overcrowded, schools would become overcrowded, recreational facilities and firefighting capabilities would be insufficient, possible devaluation of adjacent single-family homes and increased traffic have been insufficient to overcome the presumption of racial prejudice," he continued.

Boyd also warned that under the Civil Rights Act, any person depriving another of rights and privileges afforded by the Constitution and the laws of the United States is liable to any party injured.

"Conspiracy to interfere with civil rights by depriving persons of rights and privileges also subjects the offender to possible civil damages," he warned. "Public officials are not always immune from suit under the Civil Rights Act. Actual and punitive damages, as well as all attorney's fees incurred by the complaining party, are recoverable under the Civil Rights Statute."

He reminded that the Fair Housing Act also provides relief in the form of civil damages to any party subject to a discriminatory housing project.

"In addition to possible civil penalties, 18 USC 242 declares it to be a criminal offense to deprive, under color or any law, statute, ordinance, regulation or custom, any rights, privileges, or immunities secured or protected by the Constitution or laws of the United States," he added, "and 18 USC 241 makes it a criminal offense for any two or more persons to conspire to oppress or intimidate any citizen in the free exercise or enjoyment of any right or privilege secured to him by Constitution or laws of the United States."

Plowing Toward Dallas

Farmers from Plano and throughout Collin County formed a "tractorcade" yesterday morning and caravanned to Texas Stadium. The stadium rally hoped to publicize the American Agriculture movement's planned strike for Dec. 14, but the farmers had to be disappointed at the 250-person turnout when organizers had predicted 10,000 spectators.

The rally will continue today, at reduced prices from the $12-a-ticket tabs yesterday, and will feature several country and western singing artists. For more photos and information, see page eight of today's Daily Star-Courier. (Staff photo by Mike Newman).

Public Hearing On Beer, Wine Planned by P&Z

Citizens will have a last chance to comment on the regulation of beer and wine sales tonight.

The City Council and Planning and Zoning Commission will hold a joint public hearing on the matter at 7:30 p.m.

The sale of beer and wine was approved by voters in October by a 5,791 to 4,464 count. The council called a 60-day moratorium, which expires on Dec. 9, to consider appropriate regulations.

City Attorney Bill Roberts has warned the council that it has limited authority under state law to regulate sales.

Grand Jury Gives No Bills For Gambling

George Thomas Bryan and Albert Frank Mokry, arrested Sept. 30 by the Plano Police Department, have been no billed by the Collin County grand jury on charges of possession of gambling equipment.

The pair was apprehended in a night raid on the Peanut Butter and Jelly tee shirt shop, 1965 Avenue K. Police, acting on a tip, also confiscated five dice tables, two roulette wheels, 43 black jack half tables and two full size black jack tables at the clothing store.

If Bryan and Mokry had been indicted by the grand jury, they would have faced trial for a third degree felony.

"As far as I was concerned there was nothing technically wrong with the case from an evidence or police standpoint," said District Attorney Tom O'Connell. "They (the grand jury) just apparently felt after hearing the evidence that it didn't warrant prosecution."

"We did not have any evidence...that the equipment was being used for commercial gambling activities," the district attorney added. "Whether that made a difference or that was the deciding factor, I have no way of knowing."

TP&L Initiates New Program To Help Energy Conservation

Texas Power & Light Company has announced plans for expansion of its program to assist customers in conservation of energy in the home, an expansion that will entail tougher standards and offer more service to customers. The new program will go into effect January 1.

The program, formerly known as the 135-Point Energy Efficiency Plan, will now be known as the NEW E-OK Program.

It is the result of a merger of TP&L's 135-Point plan with the E-OK programs of TP&L affiliates, Dallas Power & Light and Texas Electric Service Company, and the National Energy Watch (NEW) program of the Edison Electric Institute, a national organization supported by investor-owned electric utilities around the country.

TP&L, DP&L and TESCO, affiliates of the Texas Utilities System, are the second group of utilities in the country to launch the NEW program.

Among new services starting January 1 will be advice to customers on arranging loans for home conservation projects; information on qualified insulation contractors in the TP&L service area; home energy inspections or do-it-yourself evaluation kits; and estimates of energy and cost savings that would result from various energy efficiency improvements.

Any home TP&L certifies E-OK after January 1 will automatically qualify its homeowner as a member of the National Energy Watch, the first nationally organized conservation program to encourage improved energy efficiency standards for homes.

The NEW E-OK plan retains the 135-point program for certification

Santa Came to Town

PHA Presents Award

The Plano Heritage Association presented its first Ammie award to Hunt Properties this week at Los Rios Country Club. In yesterday's Daily Star-Courier, it was incorrectly reported that the award was given by the Plano Preservation Association, a separate organization from the Heritage group.

Named in honor of Ammie Wilson whose home is now the Heritage House in Plano, the award was presented by the Heritage Association to commend Hunt Properties for its contributions of both land and money to the PHA.

The Star-Courier apologizes for the error and regrets any inconvenience or embarrassment it might have caused.

Society to Blame for Drug Use

(Editor's Note: This is the final article in a series of six outlining the various aspects of teenage drug abuse in Plano).

By TERRI ANDERSON

A society which cuts its young people loose at an early age and which labels drugs as non-drugs is the root of teenage drug use, says a University of Texas at Dallas expert in sociology and drug abuse.

"We have a society where, when a child reaches 13 or 14 years old, you cut him loose. How can you cut him loose in this society then try to prohibit him?" asked Dr. Lawrence Redlinger, associate professor of sociology and criminal justice at UTD.

"You also have a society that hypes itself up on enormous amounts of caffeine—coffee, Cokes, Mountain Dew. Alcohol is considered a drink, not a drug. Do you need help waking up? Drink some coffee. Do you need to relax? Have a drink. Are you nervous? Take a pill," Dr. Redlinger commented. "When we've got a culture that deals out these type remedies, how can we worry about the marijuana problem?"

Dr. Redlinger, a former visiting fellow to the National Drug Abuse Council in Washington D.C., claimed that the "big three" for high school students are alcohol, tobacco and marijuana, in that order.

"One now finds a multiple drug use pattern," he explained. "At parties, there's a mix of those three drugs—nicotine, alcohol and tetrahydrocannabinol (THC, the active chemical in marijuana). All three drugs are interacting."

"Years ago, there was a single use pattern," Dr. Redlinger added. "The old users didn't mix drugs. They smoked dope to enhance certain aspects of their reality and they believed that alcohol inhibited that enhancement."

The use of LSD has stabilized, said the professor, because the reactions to hallucinogens are less predictable than reactions to other drugs. Barbiturate and amphetamine use has also become stable, he said, but marijuana remains very popular.

Thanks to what Dr. Redlinger calls the "pot luck law," marijuana use has become less dangerous, legally. The recent law, which makes possession of less than four ounces of marijuana a misdemeanor compared to the previous law where possession of a single cigarette was a felony, has also served to make marijuana more readily available.

Why do the youth of today smoke marijuana and use other drugs?

"Why not?" Dr. Redlinger stated flatly. "Give me three good social reasons why not. The kinds of norms that bind young people aren't the norms that bind their parents."

Attempting to eradicate the drugs themselves will not solve the problem, said the instructor, who is currently at work with two other professors on an 18-month narcotics research grant from the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration.

"You can't knock out the supply. It only raises the price," Redlinger reasoned. "The Plano Police Department can't enforce (prohibition). Where are they going to get the manpower?"

"The best way to get people off of drugs is to let them get older."

Drug education at home and-or at school also has its limitations as a solution to drug use, according to Redlinger.

"It acquaints people with what they should or shouldn't do, but it doesn't necessarily stop them," he pointed out. "All you can hope for when you raise a child is that he'll make intelligent decisions. You just hope."

"The point is what we see linked to drug use. When it's perceived as a behavior problem, then it's abuse," he continued. "If your kids use drugs but they still make A's in school, is that a problem? People are concerned about drugs because of what they perceive the consequences to be."

Maybe, the sociologist suggested, Plano doesn't have a drug problem at all. The question depends on one's definition of "problem."

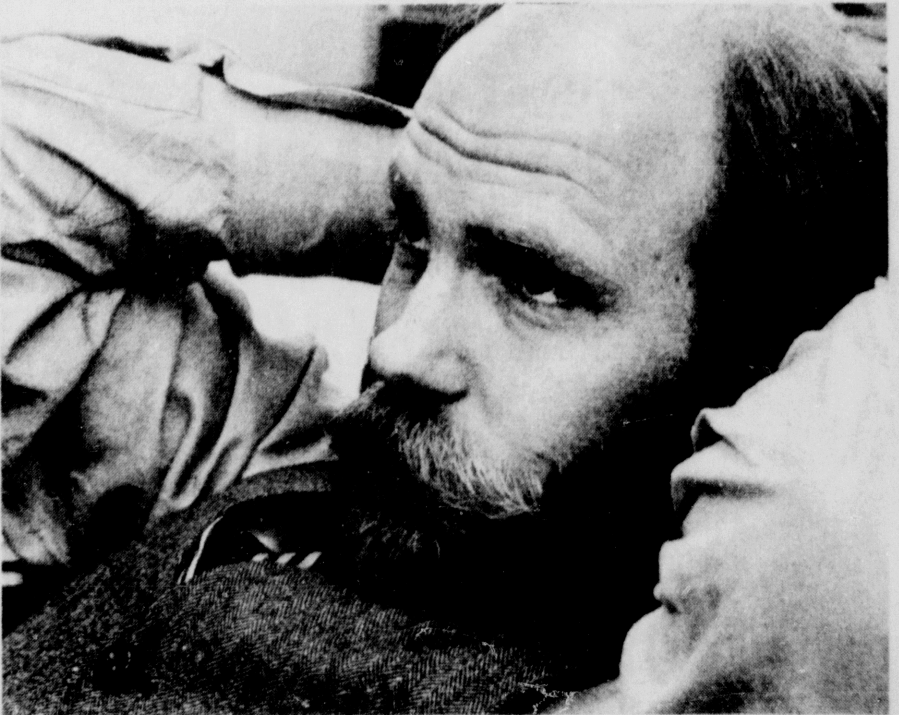

"You shouldn't debate whether or not Plano has a drug problem but at what level will the community tolerate drug use," noted Dr. Redlinger. "A community will tolerate a lot when it's busy with something else."

"What would I do if I were the police chief in Plano and thought I had a drug problem?" he hypothesized. "I'd sit down and say, 'What are the signs? Behavior problems, juvenile delinquency, burglaries?' Then I'd say, 'What's it going to cost us?' It doesn't do any good to get all upset about it emotionally. A barking dog never stopped a good burglar."

"Is there a problem? Well, what is it?" Dr. Redlinger concluded. "In so far as you want to change the culture, there's a solution. Parents will have to slow down—use less coffee, less tea, less Valium, less alcohol. They'll do that and their kids will too."

"We're hopelessly involved in the 20th Century and what it breeds. No one will come to grips with the big issues, so it comes down to what lengths will society tolerate its problems."

UTD sociology professor Lawrence Redlinger says the most popular drugs among young people are the "big three"—alcohol, tobacco and marijuana.

Society labels its most widely used drugs as "non-drugs," notes Dr. Lawrence Redlinger. Alcohol, tobacco (nicotine) and coffee (caffeine) have been virtually removed from the category of drugs by most American people. (Staff photos by Richard LaGow).

-TP&L

established by TP&L. Homes which do not earn enough points to fully meet E-OK requirements may still qualify for membership in the National Energy Watch if the owner improves the energy efficiency of the structure by at least 35 points.

TP&L customers may receive free copies of the NEW E-OK guidebook by calling the Plano office at 423-3001.

The booklet explains insulation, weatherstripping, caulking, storm windows and doors, high energy efficient heating and cooling equipment, heat pumps and other important areas that will help keep energy use and costs down.

A rating sheet in the back of the booklet assigns points to each category according to its energy efficiency value.

Thursday's hearing on the possible rezoning of a tract of land proposed as a Department of Housing and Urban Development approved project was covered by the Dallas news media. More than 100 residents adjacent to the tract crowded into council chambers to learn whether the officials would rezone the property for retail use. The City Council and Planning and Zoning Commission denied the change on advice of their attorneys. (Staff photo by Mike Newman).

-Property Rezoning Denied

Boyd's prepared statement eliminated many of the arguments which might have been expected at the joint public hearing, but eight persons testified in favor of the rezoning and one—an attorney for the owners of the property—spoke against the change.

Joe Mashburn stated that he believes "Plano is the one being discriminated against." Noting that a HUD spokesman told him the proposed development would be predominantly white, Mashburn said he failed to see discrimination in denying the project.

Jerry Hoagland said he was appalled when he read about HUD's grading system in the Daily Star-Courier.

"Don't citizens of this country have any input anymore?" he queried. "Have we let the bureaucrats become so powerful that they can cram anything down our throats?" "I'll back the city council in any effort to keep the project from becoming a reality," he promised. "I believe it will be detrimental to the community. HUD has made a mistake on the particular site. If we must, let's help with the location so everyone will benefit."

Drawing a standing ovation from the overflow crowd, Ed Dover fought a speech impediment to make a plea to the council for cooperation with the federal department.

He advised establishing two-way communications with HUD and involving Congressman Jim Collins since Congressman Jim Wright "was able to move HUD." (Dover referred to a Thursday announcement that the agency was moving its offices to Fort Worth, apparently at the behest of the majority leader.)

Glen Craker also alluded to the congressman's power when he said the city has three alternatives—"go along with HUD, fight HUD or find where Jim Wright's skeletons are buried."

Murray Mortgage Investors, the owners of the property, was represented by its attorney, B. Robert Baker.

Pointing out that the property had been zoned for apartments for six years, Baker said that the outcry did not commence until the HUD project was approved. "Apartment zoning is still the proper zoning," he stressed. "The objections tonight are not to the zoning but whether its a federal housing project."

Baker said the company has no desire for more retail acreage because the firm's most valuable retail property—on the southwest corner of the Parker Road-Avenue K intersection—can't be sold.

Bill Boyd of Boyd, Veigel & Gay Inc. told members of the City Council and Planning and Zoning Commission that all legal precedents are against the city if the site of a proposed federally assisted housing project is rezoned. The officials then voted to deny the request brought by adjacent homeowners. (Staff photo by Mike Newman).

"In my legal opinion," he added, "to rezone back under these circumstances would violate the Civil Rights Act, the Fair Housing Act, Constitutional provisions and the mandates of the U.S. Supreme Court."

After hearing all testimony, the planning commission recommended on a 5-0 vote that the request be denied without precluding a future refiling.

The council accepted the recommendation on a 4-0 vote, Larry Jackson not attending.

Before adjourning the session, Mayor Norman Whitsitt said he was pleased with the conduct of the meeting and the input of the citizens.

Pledging the council to do its best to serve the interests of the community, Whitsitt said they will do everything that can be done within the law to work out the problem.

He also warned the citizens to be wary of any action as individuals which might place them in violation of the laws of the land.

Watch Meeting Slated For Hill Campaigners

The John Hill campaign organization in Collin County, led by Planoite James Sides, will have a watch party-organizational meeting at the Safecracker Restaurant in Palisades Square beginning at 2 p.m. Saturday.

Hill will guest on an hour-long television program on KXTX-Channel 39 during the meeting and participants will be able to phone in questions for the gubernatorial candidate to answer.

The program will be broadcast over a 17-station network throughout Texas. During the program, Hill will answer questions phoned to him from all over the state and from a studio audience.

More than 300 similar party meetings are being held for Hill supporters throughout the state.

The five-year Texas Attorney General has announced he will be a candidate for governor in the Democratic primary next spring. The statewide "organizational meeting" is being paid for by $5 contributions to the Hill campaign.

The purpose of the program, Hill explained, is to give his supporters and the public a chance to ask questions and learn more about Hill and his views on issues. He will also discuss some of the campaign techniques he plans to use and will invite viewers to join the campaign effort.

The public is invited to the meeting or to watch the program at home. For more information, call James Sides at 436-2568 or 424-6165.

Plano Police Nab Man With Drugs

A 21-year-old man has been arrested for holding—in his socks—dangerous drugs and controlled substances.

Police said the suspect, who was arrested at 4:05 a.m. Thursday at a convenience grocery on Avenue K, had a suitcase containing marijuana, pills and narcotics paraphernalia in his possession.

Among the items confiscated were two small bags of marijuana, a green sock containing 83 capsules of Librax, 23 of Valium, four of Phenaphen, three of Tenuate Despan, one Emprin compound and 21 Parafon Forte and a brown sock containing nine white tablets of unknown substance and 10 foil packets of Clomax.

Miscellaneous drug accessories and four small bags with marijuana remains were also in the suitcase.

The man will also be charged with possession of fictitious drivers licenses, according to police.

Tax Collections High

tax collections for the month of October totaled $2.57 million, representing more than 50 percent of the total county tax levy for 1977.

Collin County Tax Assessor-Collector Helen Lawson announced that collections are going well for the year and that persons who have not yet paid their county taxes may do so by mail, in person at the Collin County Courthouse or at the sub-courthouse in Plano.

Mrs. Lawson also said that delinquent and supplemental taxes totaled $58,491 in October and that 1,929 automobile titles were transferred with a total of $170,240 in sales tax collected.

Innuzination Clinic Set

The Texas Department of Health Regional Office in Arlington announces an immunization clinic to be held in Plano at 926 E. 15th Street (Democratic Headquarters) on Wednesday, December 7, from 2 to 4 p.m.

The clinic will provide immunizations against diphtheria-tetanus-pertussis (DTP), polio, rubella (red measles) and rubella (German measles), for infants 2 months through 18 years (all school-age children).

Local Women Attend Conference

Planoites Give Input at National Meeting

By JUDY MONZINGO

Rubbing shoulders with prominent women such as Margaret Mead was a highlight of the National Women's Conference for four Plano women who attended the mid-November conference in Houston.

"Just to be in the same room with Margaret Mead, Barbara Jordan, all those women..." was quite an honor, according to Nancy Stevens, president of the local chapter of the League of Women Voters.

Also attending were Jeanne Peters, president of the local American Association of University Women; Ida Wellsman, a past AAUW president, and Meg Titus of the league's state board and consumer advocate for the AAUW.

The four attended not as representatives of their respective organizations or as elected delegates, but "because we were concerned."

"I feel this is a landmark time for women...this is the crossroads," said Mrs. Titus. "We now, I believe, finally have the opportunity to be treated equally."

Their impressions of the conference were that it was an orderly, fairly-conducted meeting; that it resulted in important communication between opposing factions, and it was an inspiring moment in history for women.

All four said they didn't believe the conference could have been conducted any more fairly for all sides concerned.

In answer to questions raised by the so-called pro-life groups, or right-wing factions, about the fairness of the debate procedures, Mrs. Titus said that the chairperson was in all instances extremely careful to see that all sides were heard during debates.

There were eight microphones, though, and about 1,900 delegates. Each time debate on a particular issue would open, at least 25 persons would line up at each microphone.

"There is no way we could have heard 25 people at eight microphones on 26 issues," Mrs. Titus said. She said the debates were "so carefully done."

For example, she said, if two "pro" speakers on a given issue were able to reach the microphones and no speakers from the "con" viewpoint were represented, the chairperson would ask that a "con" speaker be recognized in order to balance the debate.

The forces who opposed the National Plan of Action, most of which was adopted at the conference, have complained bitterly about unfair debate practices.

However, the Plano women agreed that the "con" speakers wasted their debate time by raising frequent points of order or using other delaying tactics rather than "debating the meat of the issues. They committed a grave, tactical error in not allowing fuller debate," Mrs. Titus said.

The one criticism the women felt may have been justified was that the conference ran overtime and a three-hour extension was called at the end of the three-day session. Because of previously-arranged airline and hotel schedules, some delegates were forced to leave without taking part in the extended session, and this led to a number of complaints.

The local women felt that there was no way the conference could have been conducted more quickly or in a more orderly fashion, though.

"The pervasive thing about the whole conference to me," Mrs. Wellsman said, "was that people talked to each other, calmly and rationally."

All agreed that the media did not adequately cover the one-to-one interaction that took place. "People were amazed to discover how little distance there really is" between their viewpoints, Mrs. Titus said. "I don't know how we could have become so divided."

The four think this interaction was the most important result of the conference and that it should be applied on a wider scale with women throughout the country.

"It's just going to have to be 'Talk, talk, talk' because some people won't read!" said Jeanne Peters.

President Carter will now receive the report on the conference, which will include recommendations on the issues listed in the National Plan of Action.

He, in turn, will submit the recommendations to Congress, and, although the federal legislators are not legally required to act on the recommendations, they have a "moral obligation and a clear mandate," say the Plano conference attendees.

The women urged that interested women follow up the report to the President and to Congress with communications with individual legislators, making known their feelings on the issues dealt with at the conference.

"I came away with a very positive feeling about the whole thing," Mrs. Titus said.

"This effort has raised the consciousness-level of American women," Nancy Stephens added.

Ida Wellsman summed up her feelings by saying she has a new "feeling of commitment...to help eradicate some of the smokescreens that have come up around the issues...I feel I have observed something historic."

Heart Memorials Can Be Donated

No heart attack is ever really sudden. It may just seem that way to the patient and members of the family.

Coronary disease has in all likelihood been building over the years, helped along by the patient who has ignored the risk factors and failed to heed the early warning signs.

When a fatal heart attack strikes someone you are close to—a loved one, friend or colleague—one way to honor his or her memory is by making a memorial contribution to the Heart Fund.

The gift will strengthen the association's heart research projects looking into the cases of heart attack, their prevention and cure. It will also support the many community service programs of the association, and its educational programs, both public and professional.

Acknowledgement of a memorial gift and its purpose is sent to the family of the person honored. Its amount is confidential.

For more information on heart memorials, call the memorial chairperson, Randy Willet, at the First National Bank of Plano, 423-4525. Contributions may also be mailed to Willet, P.O. Box 5, Plano, Tx. 75074.

Mice Move Inside With Cold Weather

It looks like cold weather may finally be getting here, and that means some of the varmints that live outside may try to come inside where it's warm. One of these varmints that everyone is familiar with is the mouse.

Around here, mice probably enter homes most often through the garage. They can squeeze through holes that are less than one-half inch in diameter, so you can see how difficult it might be to keep them outside.

Mice usually live from 15 to 18 months, and the female will have an average of 5 or six litters per year. Litters average 6-8 young but may contain as many as 15. The young are born blind and must develop for about 3 weeks before they can strike out on their own. Sexual maturity is reached at the age of 2½ months.

Mice feed mainly at night and are very fickle in their food preferences. They do not consume large amounts at one sitting like rats, but dart around picking up small morsels here and there. They prefer such foods as meats, grains, cereals, seeds, fruits, and vegetables. Mouse infestations can be detected primarily by the presence of the fecal droppings and by evidence of gnawing and chewing in fabric and food containers.

In addition to the damage which mice do to food, furniture, and clothing, they also carry and transmit a number of diseases. Rat-bite fever, Salmonella food poisoning, tapeworms, histoplasmosis and rickettsial pox are a few of the maladies which mice may transmit either directly or indirectly to humans.

Trapping is a simple and efficient method of control when the mouse infestation is small. The key is to set a sufficient number of traps in the proper locations. Some authorities recommend setting a dozen or more traps in infested rooms. Traps should be placed along baseboards, under kitchen sinks, along garage walls, in pantries, or any other areas where mice frequently travel.

The best baits are bacon and a combination of rolled oats and peanut butter. Baits should be well secured to the trap trigger, or else the mice will get away with the goodies and leave you with a bunch of empty traps.

A small piece of thread can be used to tie solid baits such as bacon to the trap.

Poison baits can also be used to control mice.

The primary baits on the market today contain an anticoagulant such as warfarin, fumarin, or diphacene. When eaten by the mice for several days, these materials cause internal hemorrhaging and death. The bait boxes should be placed in an area frequented by the mice and not moved about.

Anticoagulant baits will require a few days to show results. Always exercise extreme care in handling poison baits.

ASK DOC GARD'NER by NEIL SPERRY

Dear Doc: We recently attended our county pecan show and were taken by the huge Mahan pecans. Are they good for this area? Do you have any better suggestions?

Mahan is an old favorite pecan. Its kernels most generally top 2 inches, so it obviously is one of our largest fruiting varieties. It's also a lovely landscape tree, having attractive shape and full foliage. The main drawbacks are that Mahan kernels just don't have much flavor and, once the tree is fairly large, it can't transport enough food and water to fill out all the kernels uniformly. The result is a bit disappointing—2 inch shells and 1 inch kernels. Three better varieties are Mohawk, Chocklaw and Desirable.

Dear Doc: Each year we get loads of grapes off the vines in our back yard, but they never ripen. What can we do?

Failure to ripen is generally associated with the variety you're growing. For example, our area Concord doesn't ripen uniformly many years. Other than that, I'd suggest you check your watering and fertilizing practices. Be sure not to let the plants get extremely dry during the summer or you'll have poorly developed fruit that may not ripen properly.

Dear Doc: Could you recommend a good tree that wouldn't get over 20 feet tall? We need it for a small patio area.

Tree-form crape myrtle, Japanese ligustrum and yaupon holly all fit that category, as would golden rain tree, crabapples and redbud.

Dear Doc: We have some Spanish moss growing in our trees—we brought it back from South Texas. Will it hurt the trees?

Probably not in North Texas. Spanish moss is semi-tropical and doesn't grow too rapidly in our colder winters. Low summer humidity is also hard on it in this area. Since it is not a parasite, about the only way it could hurt the tree would be by heavy shading.

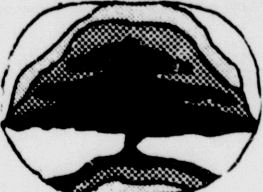

Dear Doc: Should we use fireplace ashes on our compost pile?

Assuming that the soil in your area is highly alkaline, you'll be better off sending it off with the trash. Ashes are quite alkaline and can add to an already severe soil problem. In acid soil areas they're fine.

Texas Citrus Fruits Prettier

If you've begun looking for those juicy, delicious, but ugly, brown-scarred Texas oranges and grapefruit in your local supermarket, look again. You may not have recognized them.

Your favorite fruit may look a little prettier than in past years, since it is the same warm Texas wind which sweetens and ripens the fruit which is to blame for those brown wind scars. And the Texas Department of Agriculture reports very little wind damage to the 1977 citrus crop so far this year.

"Our crop this year is a little smaller so far," commented Agriculture Commissioner Reagan V. Brown, "but with cooler temperatures and the rain which fell in the Lower Rio Grande Valley during the past few weeks, we expect the fruit development to speed up."

Brown said quality of the fruit was "excellent."

Production this year is expected to be 10 percent below the 789,000 tons produced last season, with the forecast, based on conditions the first of the month, to reach 708,000 tons.

Grapefruit production is forecast at 440,000 tons, 11 percent below last season and four percent less than last month, according to the Texas Crop and Livestock Reporting Service.

All orange production is expected to total 268,000 tons, down three percent from last month and nine percent below last year. Early and mid-season orange production is projected at 166,000 tons, while Valencia oranges are forecast at 102,000 tons.

Novel Workshop
NEW YORK (UPI) — A novel four-day workshop and vacation plan, emphasizing the physical and mental aspects of jogging, is being offered by the 400-room Princess Tower in Freeport, Bahamas, through December. The cost includes a room for three nights, three meals daily, transfers, tips and taxes. It starts from $269 per person, double occupancy.

For French Museums
PARIS (UPI) — The French ministry for culture and environment has set up special tours in museums with new commentaries in English, German and Spanish.

English and French tours are available at the Louvre museum in Paris daily except Tuesday and Sunday between 10:30 a.m. and 3 p.m.

At Versailles, tours in English begin daily at 11 a.m., 1 p.m. and 2 p.m.; and at the Trianon pavilion, daily at 11 a.m. and noon.

Haitians Turn Recycling into Art
PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (UPI) — Recycling, relatively new to most Americans, has long been an art in Haiti.

Old tires are made into door mats and sandals, which are practically indestructible and are considered quaint by tourists. Tin cans are flattened inside out and turned into artistic candlestick holders and one-of-a-kind chandeliers highly coveted by visitors to the Iron Market here.

Empty beer cans are particularly prized. Flattened, with brand name exposed, they are melded into bright trays and even suitcases. Beer can carrying cases are lightweight, durable and are finished with polished scraps of local woods.

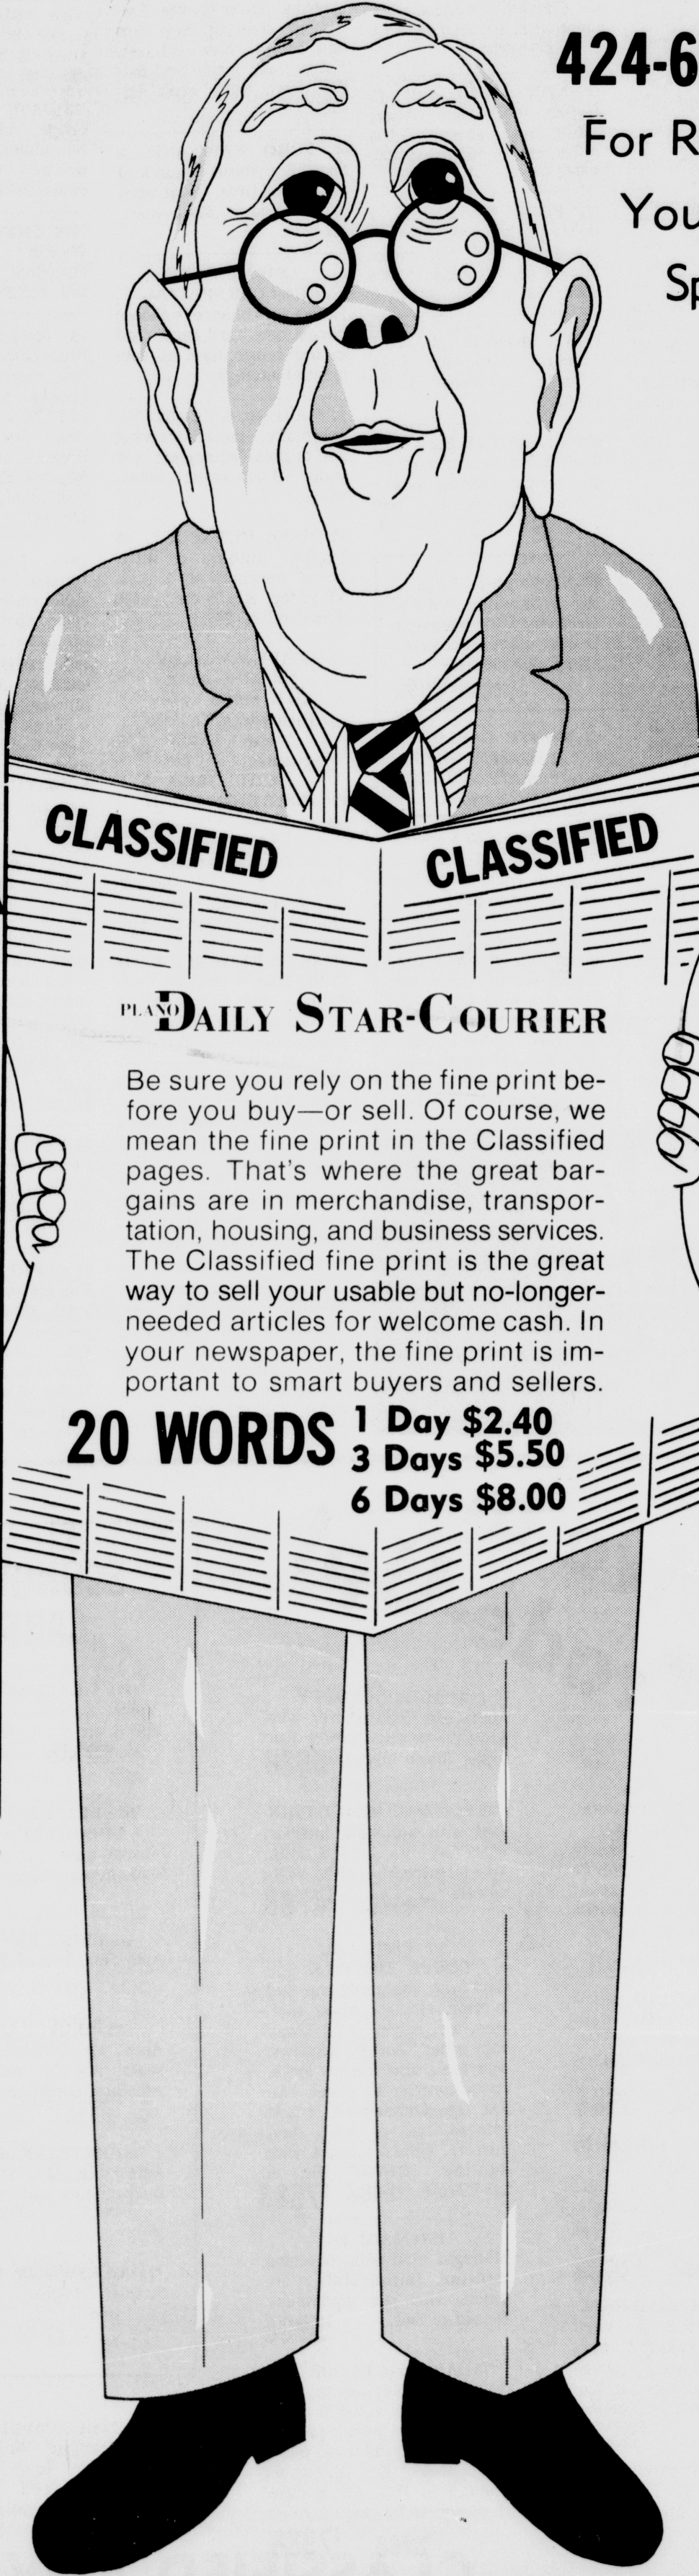

Hardly anything in Haiti is discarded after being used only once.

There's a popular story about an ill-fated car which crashed and fell into a ravine. Nearby residents stripped the car, finding a use for every bit. A week later, nothing remained to mar the tranquil countryside.

POISON WARNING
SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI) — Model airplane builders should use epoxy compounds outdoors or in a spray booth only and wear a face mask, says the Illinois Division of Aeronautics. Vapor from resins and hardeners in epoxy can inflame lung and heart tissues, causing coronary problems. The effects of epoxy poisoning multiply with repeated exposures, the division said.

Be sure you rely on the fine print before you buy—or sell. Of course, we mean the fine print in the Classified pages. That's where the great bargains are in merchandise, transportation, housing, and business services. The Classified fine print is the great way to sell your usable but no-longer-needed articles for welcome cash. In your newspaper, the fine print is important to smart buyers and sellers.
